

Brett Smith

Director of Payment Strategy and Innovation Division

Office of Payment Management Services

U.S. Treasury, Bureau of the Fiscal Service

Brett Smith is Director of the Payment Strategy and Innovation Division at the U.S. Department of the Treasury's Bureau of the Fiscal Service. His role is applying a vision of an All-Electronic Treasury and digital payment transformation replacing Treasury paper check payments with burgeoning payment technologies and cross-governmental collaborations.

Brett has served many roles in the Bureau of the Fiscal Service ranging from Executive Deputy Director of the Treasury's Philadelphia Financial Center to Chief of Staff in Treasury's outstanding debt collections. His experience in technology and product development in collaboration with the private sector and federal agencies, is his signature approach. He has developed many of the collection and payment products provided by the Treasury and used world-wide.

Brett participates in the Faster Payments Council examining future payments. Brett also puts his PMP®- applied program management skills into practice with Federal agencies to discover new areas of relevance and value to the public by testing artificial intelligence, blockchain, digital identities and wallets, and applying human-centered design. He is active on the Advisory Board for the University of Mary Washington's College of Business and is a graduate from Washington University in St. Louis's Olin Business School and Brookings Institution partnership.