

Craig is a Special Advisor at the Mayor's Office of Data Analytics, where he supports a variety of strategic initiatives for the NYC Open Data and NYC Analytics programs. Prior to working in local government, Craig researched trends in municipal data analytics and government technology at the Harvard Kennedy School, where he supported several national policy networks and research programs at the Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation. Craig holds a degree in architecture and mathematics from Amherst College.