

Frequently Asked Questions:

1. How does the week-long Fedstival schedule work?

Fedstival will take place on October 9, 10 and 11 at various locations throughout Washington, DC, and will feature events during the day and at night, Tuesday through Thursday. The week-long schedule with multiple events per day makes it easier for federal employees to attend the events on the topics that they care about most without impacting their workflow throughout the week. You can pick and choose which programs you'd like to attend to make the schedule that works best for you! We'll end the week with a closing reception on Thursday to toast the peer-nominated Bold Presenters and celebrate the full week of events.

2. Will additional events be announced?

We will be announcing additional morning, afternoon and evening programming in the coming months. You can find the latest list of programs at www.govexec.com/feature/fedstival-18/.

3. Is there a fee to register for Fedstival?

There is no cost associated with registering for Fedstival. Both government and industry personnel can register for this event, free of charge.

4. What if I work at a government agency and am interested in speaking at an event or partnering to create an event?

We're always looking for partners to help us create additional programs during Fedstival. If you work at a government agency and are interested in speaking or partnering for a program, please reach out to Annie Bruce at abruce@govexec.com.

5. How can I sponsor an event?

If you're interested in sponsoring a program, please reach out to Anna Pettyjohn at apettyjohn@govexec.com for more information.

6. How can I stay up-to-date on Fedstival announcements?

By signing-up for updates on our website, you'll receive information about the full week of Fedstival events and details for how to register for individual events.

7. My question is not listed above, who can I contact?

Please reach out to Annie Bruce at abruce@govexec.com for additional information.