Hemant Patel is a technology sales executive with a career that spans over 20 years. Currently, he is an Account Executive at Intel where he leverages Intel's leading-edge technology for his customers. With his extensive experience in sales and business development, coupled with his technical expertise, Hemant has proven himself to be a highly effective leader in the technology industry. His ability to build strong customer relationships, identify new business opportunities, and leverage technology to engage customers has been critical to his success. Hemant holds a BS degree in Computer Science from North Carolina State University.