

Steven Hernandez is an information assurance executive serving the past twenty years in dynamic and impactful missions. His rich background includes law enforcement, financial, education, healthcare, credentialing, heavy manufacturing, non-profits, and governments at the federal, state, and local levels. Presently, he is the Chief Information Security Officer at the US Department of Education and is one of the founders of Zero Trust Architecture for the Federal Civilian Executive Branch. Steven serves as the co-chair of the US Government Federal CISO Council and Government Chair of the ACT-IAC Cybersecurity Community of Interest.