

Jeremiah Sanders is a DoD-certified Executive Program Manager who served in both the Navy and Air Force. He joined VMware after co-founding the DoD's premiere software startup, Kessel Run, and growing it to 1,300 members. Jeremiah's diverse background includes Joint, operational, and Navy nuclear power plant engineering, maintenance and operations coupled with PM experience in all acquisition phases; particularly IT, software intensive systems, C4ISR, and satellite development and sustainment.

Jeremiah leverages government procurement system, mission operations, technology landscape and entrepreneurial management experience to bridge the gap between government and the technology industry. He guides industry to understand the applicability of commercial technologies and practices to government use-cases while advising government organizations through people, process and technology transformations to deliver mission/business outcomes.