John Linford is the Security Forum and Open Trusted Technology Forum (OTTF) Director of The Open Group, which is a global consortium that enables the achievement of business objectives through technology standards. As Forum Director, John supports the leaders and participants of the Security Forum and OTTF in utilizing the resources of The Open Group to facilitate collaboration and follow The Open Group consensus-based Standards process to publish their deliverables. The Security Forum focuses on producing next-generation risk evaluation and security technology approaches, methods, applications, and best practices, including the Open FAIR™ Standards and Zero Trust Architecture, while the OTTF aims to utilize its public-private partnerships to increase product integrity and supply chain security by developing open standards and certification programs that identify Open Trusted Technology Providers™ - so that industry can "Build with integrity, buy with confidence".

John is Open FAIR Certified and holds a bachelor's degree in economics and a master's degree in applied economics from San Jose State University.
