

Jonathan D. Sanders is the Director of GovExec's Government Business Council, leading a team of researchers and data scientists dedicated to bridging the insights gap between government contractors and government buyers. In addition, Jonathan serves as Director of Leading Brands, the largest public sector study of its kind that analyzes brand perception among government leaders of 80 of the top government contractors in the marketplace.

Prior to joining Government Executive, Jonathan was Director of the Institute for Defense and Government Advancement, a Defense focused think tank, and before that contributed as a Program Director at Defense Strategies Institute. Jonathan is a graduate of the University of Scranton with degrees in History and Political Science.