

Karen Worstell's 30 years in the cybersecurity industry spans federal, public, and private sector across multiple industries. She has been a CISO for multiple iconic brands, led the security consultancy practice at SRI International, and conducted security research and engineering in the earliest days of cybersecurity as part of Boeing Research and Technology. She is a best-selling author and ISSA Distinguished Fellow and a frequent speaker on risk management, cybersecurity governance and oversight, and internal control strategies. Her passion is making companies, and individuals, more resilient.