

Kathryn Basinsky is a Policy Analyst with the National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA). She coordinates NTIA's private sector information sharing efforts through the Communications Supply Chain Risk Information Partnership (C-SCRIP), which was mandated by the Secure and Trusted Communications Networks Act of 2019. In addition to C-SCRIP, Ms. Basinsky helps develop NTIA policy on cybersecurity, cyber supply chain, and next generation telecommunications issues.

Prior to joining NTIA, Ms. Basinsky worked for GDIT, where she supported the Department of Homeland Security's (DHS) Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA). She received her BA in Political Science and Geography from the University of Tennessee, and her MA in Diplomacy and International Commerce from the University of Kentucky.
