

Michael Kalin

Michael is a Senior Advisor with the Behavioral Insights Team (BIT) North America, where he focuses on using behavioral insights to improve the delivery of municipal services as part of the “What Works Cities” initiative and leads BIT's work on dissemination and training. Prior to BIT, Michael was a research manager for the Washington, D.C.-based Analyst Institute, collaborating with political campaigns to design and implement field experiments on voter mobilization and persuasion. He has worked for several years with the Government of Canada’s Privy Council Office on a range of international issues, with secondments to the Canadian Embassy in Afghanistan and the International Organization for Migration (IOM). He is currently a PhD candidate in Political Science at Yale University and a fellow at the University of Denver’s Sié Center.