

Laura Beaufort is a Technical Lead at the Federal Election Commission, where she works to increase transparency in campaign finance. Previously, she led the open-source development of fec.gov and is now leading the development of a web-based platform to replace FECFile, the agency's legacy filing software. Her interests include application security, performance improvement, and fixing bugs. She also actively participates in the open source community, having contributed to several open source projects.