

Raymond A. Limon is the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Capital and Diversity, and Chief Human Capital Officer, and he is a career member of the Senior Executive Service at the Department of the Interior (DOI). His Directorate provides strategic human capital; safety/health; and training policies and services for the Department's 70,000 plus employees serving in over 350 occupations and 2,400 locations. Before joining DOI, Ray led the State Department's Civil Service HR Management office. Ray has also served as the Chief Human Capital Officer at the Corporation for National and Community Service (e.g., AmeriCorps, VISTA, Senior Corps, etc.), and chaired the Small Agency Human Resources Council, representing approximately 100 Federal agencies and organizations. He was also an attorney at the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM) Office of General Counsel specializing in employment litigation and policy review; and he served as OPM's Director of the Office of Administrative Law Judges (ALJs), where he managed the government-wide personnel system for ALJs. Ray received his J.D. from Indiana University, Bloomington, and he is a former Peace Corps Volunteer (Honduras).