

Sean Morse has been at the US Census Bureau for over 20 years. He has worked on various surveys, including: Annual Capital Expenditure Survey, Manufacturing Shipments Inventories and Orders, American Community Survey, Investment Goods Surveys, and countless other Economic surveys. Sean has always been pushing for new and innovative ways to capture and analyze data from day one...teaching himself SAS so he could better communicate survey needs with the programming staff, and working closely with anyone who'd let him. Sean has also enjoyed taking steps back to gain new perspectives on the Census World by learning about budgets and becoming a Contract Officer Representative. Sean currently manages over $60M in annual contracts. Sean never shies away from learning something new and bringing yet another angle/perspective to the task at hand. Sean's goal is to be a good steward of taxpayer dollars, while also finding ways to make the government matter to everyday people and businesses.
