

Scott Quehl is a senior principal at Accenture Federal Services, leading in the Strategic Government Efficiency initiative after serving as the Presidentially-appointed, Senate-confirmed Assistant Secretary for Administration and Chief Financial Officer of the Department of Commerce. Quehl led Commerce in delivering hundreds of millions in savings and other efficiencies through improved budgeting, acquisitions, human resource management, shared services, facility consolidation and enterprise risk management and performance reporting. He has supported state and local governments as a managing director at JPMorgan Securities, Public Financial Management, and Public Resources Advisory Group. He is a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration, a CFO Sage for the Partnership for Public Service, and was selected in 2013 as one of the U.S. Federal Government's Top 100 Information Technology Executives as a leader in establishing BusinessUSA -- through which businesses can access over 4,000 services from nine Federal agencies.
